

BENEFITS OF BUYING FROM FARMERS' MARKET

-  You are buying food for your family that is fresher than supermarket alternative.
-  You are supporting local farmers (they receive 100% of the profit), and help family farms to stay in business.
-  With weekly sales, farms can harvest their produce at the peak of flavor, and preserve the nutritional content of fresh produce.
-  You get a selection of in-season quality products and form a bond with local farmers and other community members.

At roughly eight calories of energy to produce one typical food calorie, today's food system is energy-intensive and inefficient. The average food item travels at least 1500 miles; since locally-grown produce does not travel as far, the difference in mileage saves the fossil fuels and preserves natural resources. Locally or regionally produced food ensures food security for our communities and boosts the local economy.
